MADAR | مدار

USER GUIDE · NOVEMBER 2026

All of MADAR, step by step.

From the home page to your trading journal: every section, what it is for, and how to use it.

CONTENTS · THE JOURNEY

Your journey, step by step.

This guide follows a reader's path, from the first visit to your trading journal. MADAR is available in French, English and Arabic, in a light or dark appearance.

Discover and sign up

Opening madarmagazine.com takes you straight to the Today page: what is free can be read without an account, and a “?” next to each section explains, in pictures, what it is for. Create your account in a minute: 7 days of full reading, no bank card needed.

P. 3

Read the day

Today brings together the day's article, currency strength and the agenda. News follows market headlines live, translated.

P. 4–5

Follow a currency

In Currencies, each currency has its own page: weekly analysis, rate expectations, macroeconomics. Analysis breaks down key figures; Reports translates the banks.

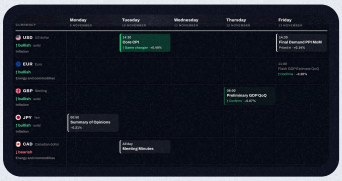

P. 6 · 8

The calendar

The week hour by hour: each release with its forecast and the analysts' range, then the actual figure the moment it comes out, live.

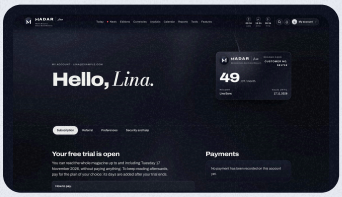

P. 7

The tools, your journal

The trading plan, the weekly barometer, the analysis board, retail positions, correlations, Fair value… Then the journal (beta): you record each trade there, and MADAR reviews it with you.

P. 9–14

Your account

My account brings together your subscription, referrals, your preferences and help. That's where you choose the appearance, light or dark.

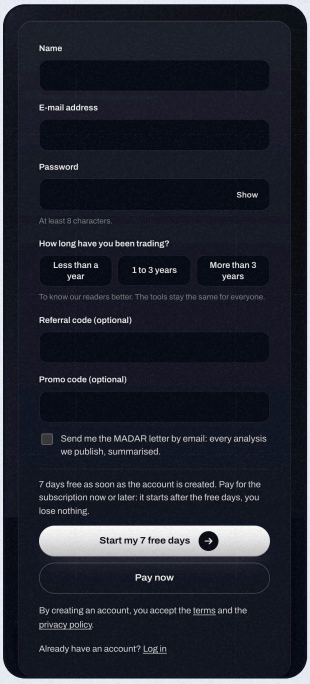

P. 15

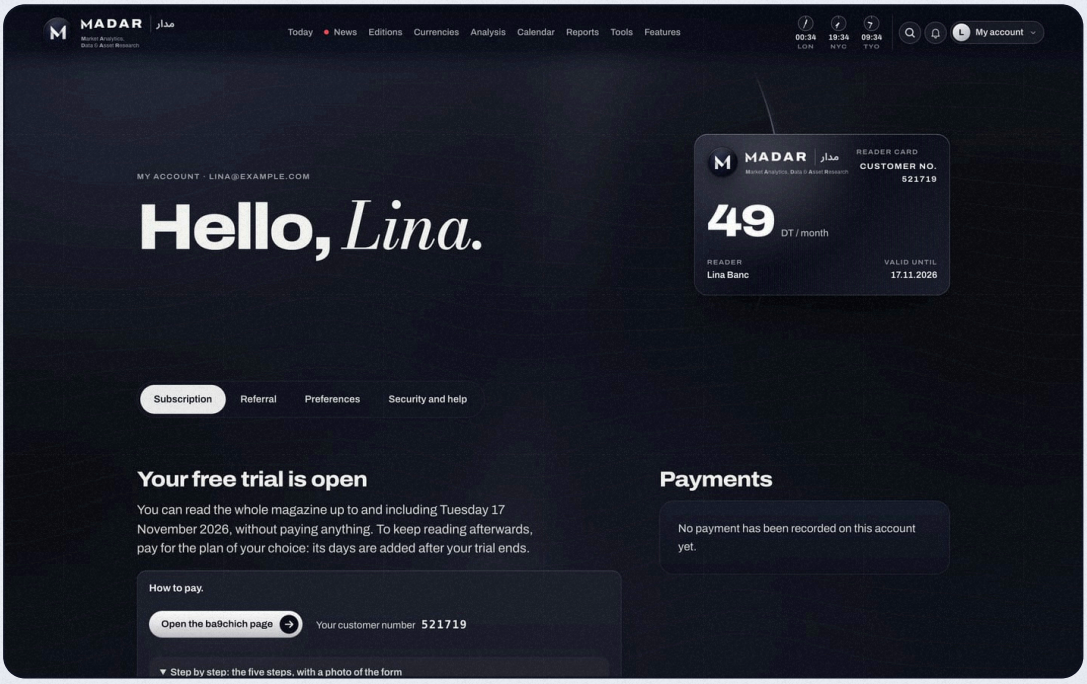

TIP Language, theme, clocks and this guide are in the “My account” menu (“Log in” without an account), at the top of the page: the site remembers your choice.

FIRST STEPS · SIGN-UP

Your account, in one minute.

The account is free and opens 7 days of full reading, no bank card needed. Pay for the subscription now or after the trial: its days add up, nothing is lost.

The form

Your name, your email, a password of at least 8 characters, and how long you have been trading. Referral and promo codes are optional.

Trial or payment

“Start my 7 free days” opens the platform, with a guided tour. “Pay now” takes you straight to payment.

Three plans

1 month: 49 DT. 3 months: 117 DT (–20%). 12 months: 411 DT (–30%). Paid once, no renewal. In Algeria, Morocco and Egypt: in your currency.

Pay on ba9chich

In My account › Subscription, open the ba9chich page and log in to your (free) ba9chich account. Enter the amount in diamonds (1 diamond = 1 DT) and your customer number in the name box.

“I've paid”

Come back to My account, choose the amount you sent and click “I've paid”. The editors check it and open your subscription within 24 hours.

Referral and promo code

A referral code gives you and your referrer a free month each, from your first payment; a promo code reduces every subscription. Enter them before you pay.

IN YOUR TRADING

Use the 7-day trial during a week full of releases: you will see the trading plan and the live view at work.

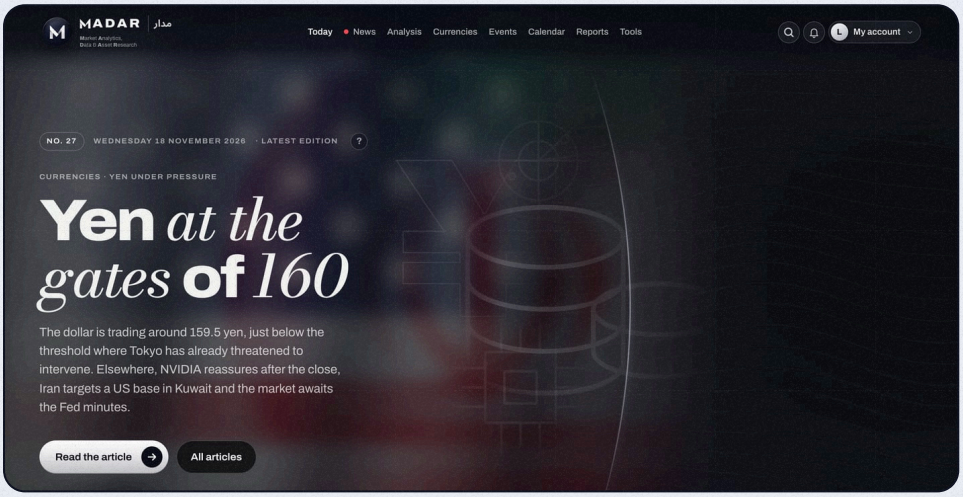

TIP

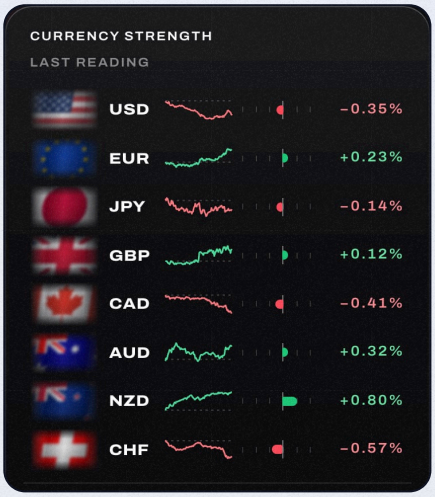

Your customer number is on your reader card, at the top of My account. Without it, your payment can't be matched to you.

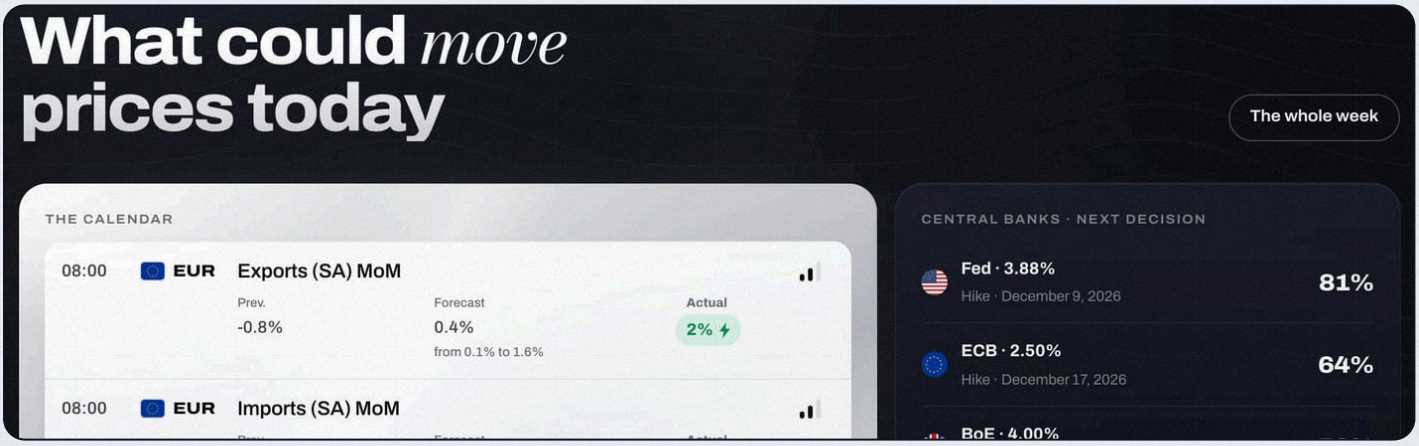

READING · TODAY

The Today page (madarmagazine.com) is your starting point every morning. From any page, click the MADAR logo at the top to come back to it.

The lead article

At the top, the day's article with its poster. Click “Read the article” to read it in full, or “All articles” to see the newsstand.

Currency strength

Next to the article, the eight currencies, gold and silver, always in the same order, each with what it has gained or lost since midnight. The list updates itself every minute.

The eight-currency strip

Below the article, a strip scrolls by: for each currency, its trend for the day (bullish, bearish…) and why, in one sentence from the editors.

Just in

The latest important headlines, and the risk sentiment gauge, from Risk off to Risk on: fear (VIX), equities, safe-haven currencies, gold, oil.

The agenda and the banks

The day's medium- and high-impact releases, and the next decision of the eight central banks with its probability. “The whole week” opens the calendar.

The newsstand

The latest publications: daily articles and analysis. At the bottom, “All editions” and “Other analysis” open the archives.

IN YOUR TRADING

Start the day here: currency strength tells you who is strong and who is weak; the agenda, when the market may move.

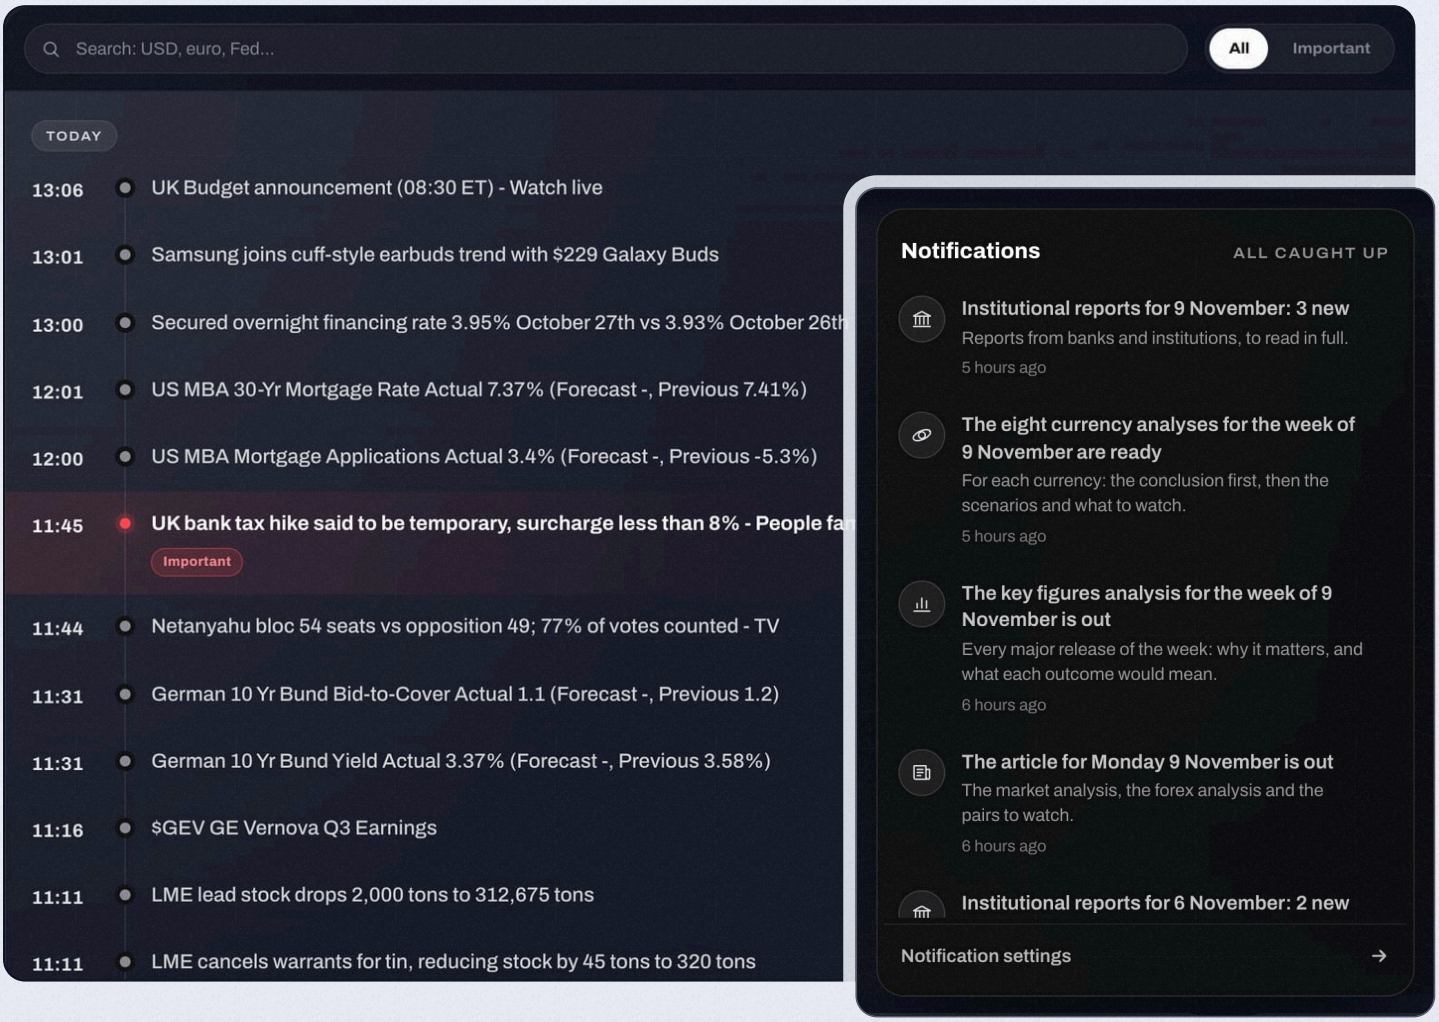

TIP

Click a central bank: its currency's page opens, with the rate expectations.

READING · NEWS

The market, minute by minute.

Headlines from specialist sites, translated as they come in, from newest to oldest. The page updates itself every minute: no need to reload it.

The live feed

Open News, marked with a red dot in the top bar. When a headline is about a currency or its central bank, its flag appears below it. “Show more” goes back up to 48 hours.

Important news

Click “Important” to keep only those: a figure that surprises, a central bank speaking. Search filters by word: USD, euro, Fed...

Read a headline

Click a headline: it opens in place, with its “In brief” summary. For an important one, “See the impact” shows what is supported ▲ or under pressure ▼.

On-screen alerts

When an important headline or a high-impact figure comes out, a card rises at the bottom of the screen, wherever you are on the site. It stays ten seconds (longer if your mouse is on it), then leaves on its own.

Sound, other tabs

In My account › Preferences: “Sound” is on from the start, turn it off if you prefer; turn on the alert for when you are on another tab. The setting applies to this browser.

The bell

With an account, even a free one, click the bell at the top: the day's article, reports, the 8 currencies, key figures, the analysis of your journal. A red dot counts what's new.

IN YOUR TRADING

Keep the feed open while you trade: an important headline on your currency can justify tightening a stop or waiting.

TIP

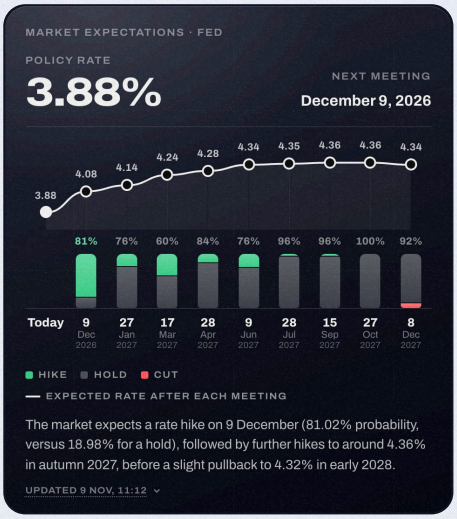

On a narrower screen (phone, tablet, small laptop), the bell is in the menu: a red dot on its button means something new.

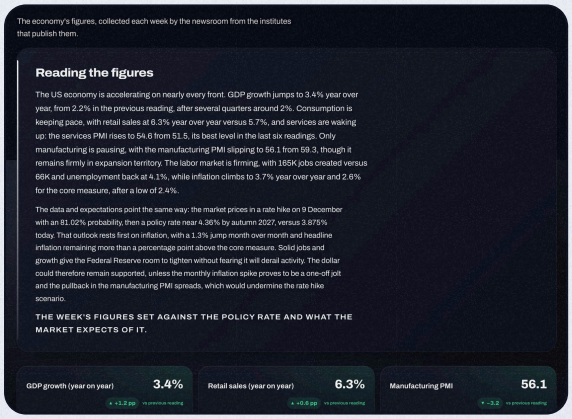

SECTIONS · CURRENCIES

Dollar, euro, pound, yen, Swiss franc, Canadian, Australian and New Zealand dollars: each currency has its page, with what the market expects from its central bank and its weekly analysis.

Choose a currency

Open “Currencies” in the menu, then click a card. At the top of its page, the row of eight codes leads to the others; the colored dot shows their trend.

Rate expectations

At the top: the policy rate, the next meeting and, meeting by meeting, the most likely outcome with its probability. Hover over a bar for details.

The weekly analysis

“Weekly analysis” tab: the conclusion, the key points, the text and what to watch. Below, the currency's agenda for the week.

“If… then” scenarios

Each scenario says what would happen to the currency if a given event occurs. Green, it supports it; red, it weighs on it; gray, its effect is neutral.

The economic figures

“Macroeconomics” tab: the analysis of the figures, then one card per indicator, colored by the effect of its level on the currency. Click for its chart, its definition and when it was last updated.

Seasonality and COT

“Quantitative analysis” tab: the currency's average path over 5, 10 and 15 years against this year, and funds' net position according to the CFTC (the COT).

IN YOUR TRADING

Before trading a pair, open both currencies: a supported currency against a weighed-on one is the cleanest trade.

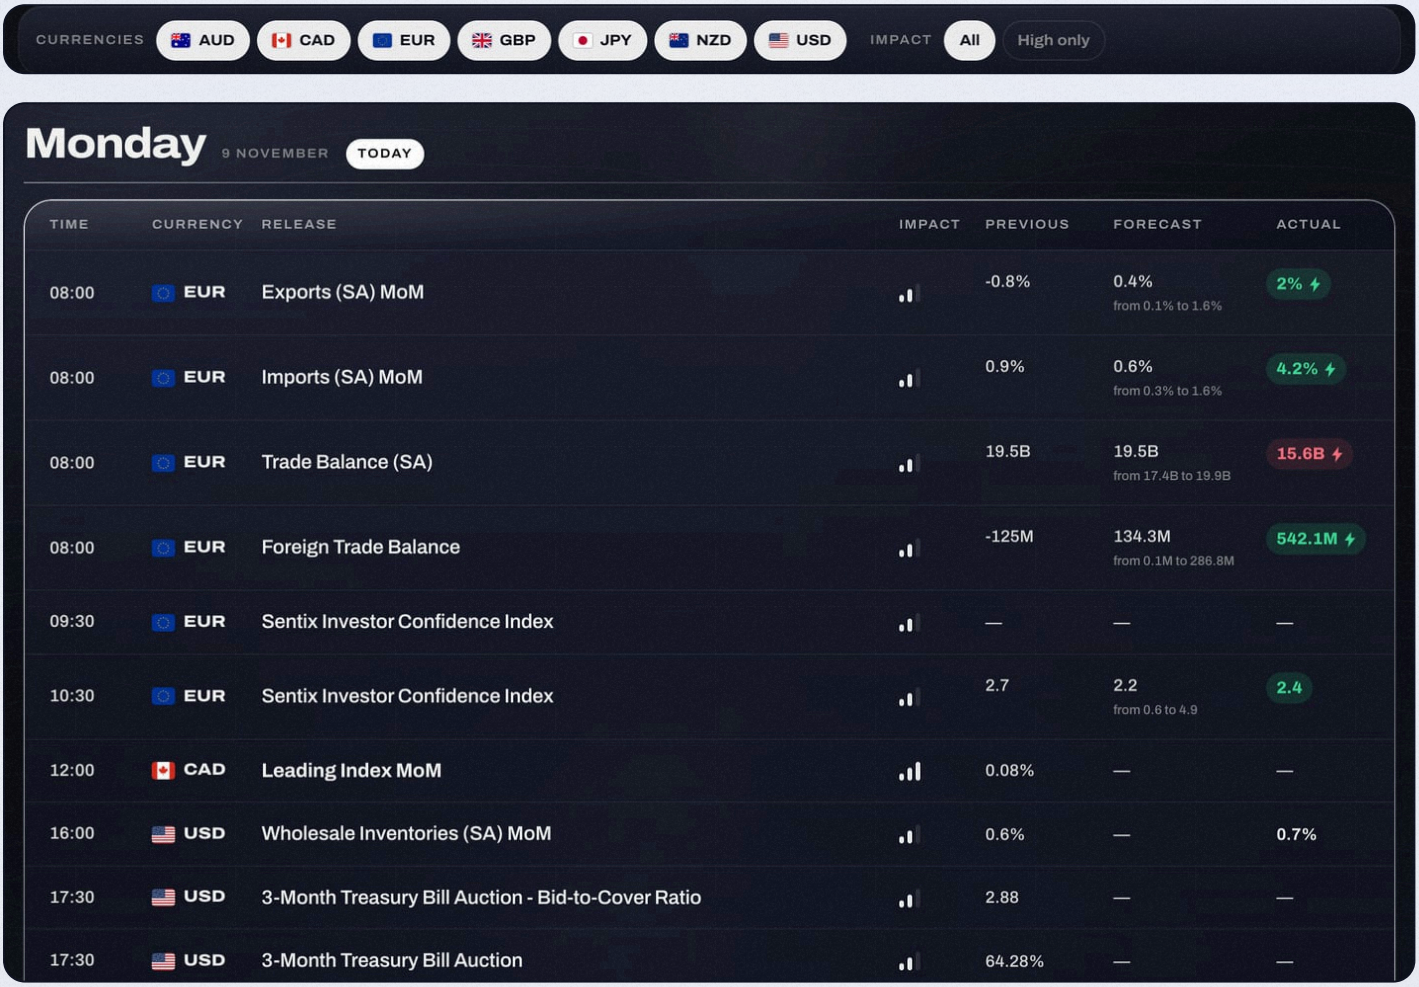

TIP

Below the expectations chart, click “Updated…” and choose a day: you see what the market expected back then.

SECTIONS · CALENDAR

The week, hour by hour.

All the week's economic releases, day by day: the time, the currency, the impact, the previous figure, the forecast, then the actual figure as soon as it is out.

Read a row

The time, the currency, the release, then the impact in three bars. Three full bars: the figure can move prices within seconds.

The analysts' range

Below the forecast, “from … to …” gives the analysts' lowest and highest forecasts. You see how far opinions differ, not just their average.

The actual figure

It appears on its own, without reloading the page. Green, it supports the currency; red, it weighs on it. A lightning bolt: it is outside the analysts' range.

Filter the week

Click a code (USD, EUR…) to hide its currency or bring it back. Under “Impact”, “High only” keeps only high-impact releases; “All” brings them all back.

On your time

Times follow your clock. Click a clock at the top of the page: it turns green, and the calendar is set to it.

Alerts

When an important figure comes out, a card appears at the bottom of the page, wherever you are on the site, with a “See the calendar” link.

IN YOUR TRADING

Spot the three-bar events of the week: avoid opening just before them, or prepare them in the trading plan.

TIP

Hover over an actual figure: a tooltip tells you whether it came in above or below the forecast.

SECTIONS · ANALYSIS AND ARCHIVES

Read, reread, and go to the source.

The week's key figures and the editors' analysis, then what stays: every edition published and the reports of banks and institutions, to read in full.

Key figures

"Events" menu: the releases that can really move prices, day by day. For each one, why it matters and its scenarios.

Past weeks

On the "Weeks" row, click a date to reread the key figures of an earlier week. At the bottom, "See the full calendar" opens the current week's calendar.

In-depth analysis

"Analysis" menu, "In-depth analysis" tab: a central bank decision, an upcoming event, a topic of the moment. Click a poster to read the analysis and its scenarios.

Past editions

"Analysis" menu, "Daily editions" tab: one article a day, sorted by month. Open a poster to reread that day's market, forex and agenda.

Institutions' reports

"Reports" menu: weekly reports week by week, daily ones day by day. Click a report to read it in full, in your language.

Finding your way in a report

A long report has its contents, "In this report": click a section to go there. The analysis remains the institution's; MADAR transcribes it.

IN YOUR TRADING

The key figures' scenarios give you the likely reaction before the release; the reports, the banks' view to confirm it.

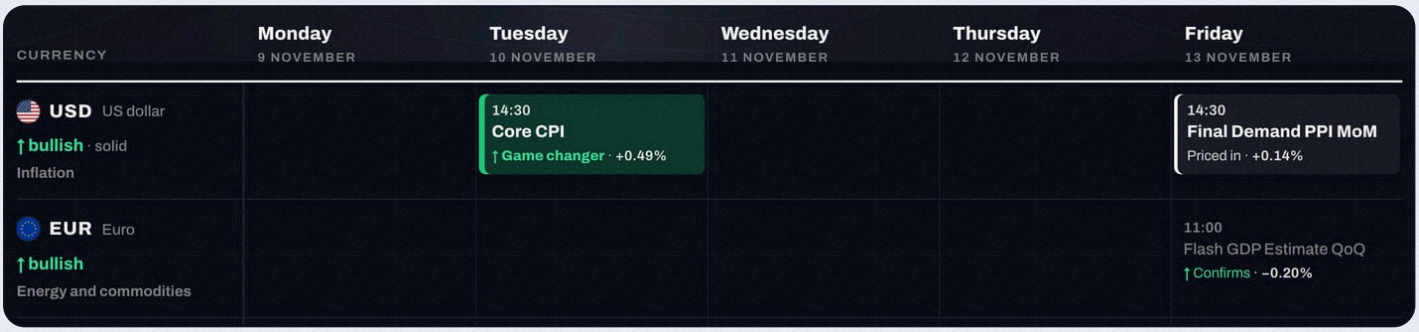

TIP

With an account, the bell at the top of the page lets you know when the week's key figures or new reports come out.

TOOLS · READ THE MARKET

The trading plan.

MADAR's flagship: every major event of the week, prepared with the same method — the currency's picture, the figure that matters, what could change it — then the live verdict on release. Beta, for subscribers (trial included): a reading, not advice.

The week in one grid

Tools › Trading plan: the eight currencies and gold, Monday to Friday. Boxed: the key events; at the start of each row, the currency's picture. “Last week” replays the previous one.

Colours on release

Green if the figure lifts the currency, red if it weighs on it, grey if it was priced in. Dark when it changes the picture, light when it nuances or confirms it.

The picture

Click an event: first the currency's picture — bullish, bearish or mixed — in one sentence. It always follows the same method: the driver, our weekly analysis, the banks, what is priced.

The figure that matters

The one on our Events sheet, with its consensus and previous reading, and why it is the one the market watches this week.

What could change the picture

A five-zone scale: right on consensus, it is priced in; slightly above or below, the figure confirms or nuances the picture; far off, it changes it. One sentence per zone.

Live

Ten minutes before the time, a countdown to the second. The figure shows as soon as the headline lands, with the verdict, the currency minute by minute and “right direction?” at +15 min and +1 h.

IN YOUR TRADING

Before the figure, note the zone that would change your trade; on release, the verdict tells you in seconds whether the picture holds. Aim first at what changes the picture.

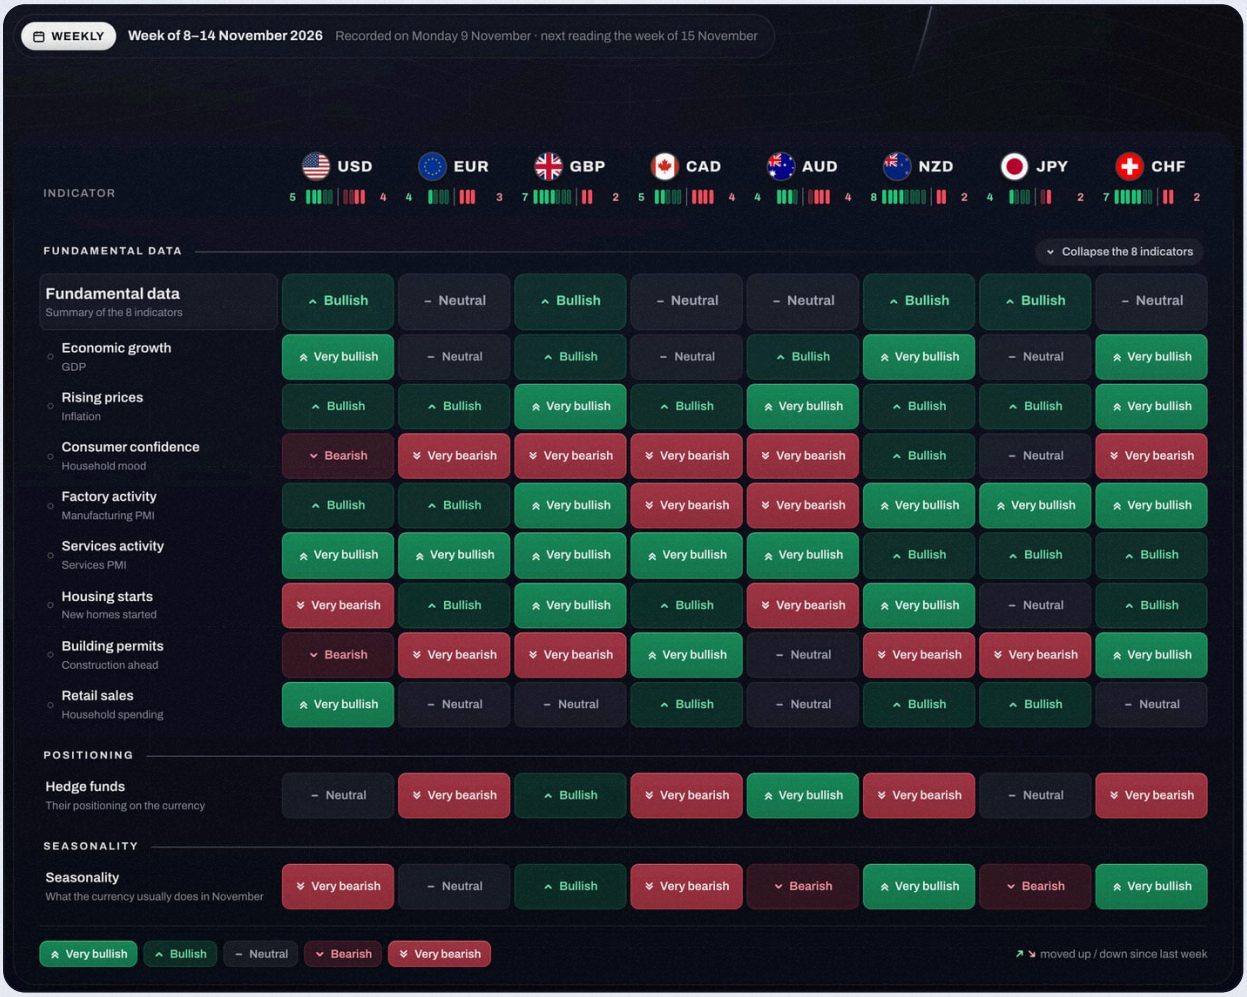

TIP

“Priced in” is an answer too: with no surprise, there is often nothing to trade. The plan updates itself if a bank, our analysis or the market changes its view before the release.

The weekly barometer.

One table, updated every week: for the eight currencies, the direction of their economic data, hedge fund positioning and seasonality, from very bullish to very bearish. For subscribers, trial included.

The week recorded

At the top: “Weekly”, the week covered, the day of the reading and the week of the next one. Previous weeks can be read again at the bottom of the page.

One column per currency

Dollar, euro, pound, Canadian, Australian and New Zealand dollars, yen, Swiss franc. Under each flag, a small gauge counts its bullish, neutral and bearish lines.

Five levels

Very bullish, bullish, neutral, bearish, very bearish: each box has its colour and its arrow, single or double, and, on a wide enough screen, its level in words.

Fundamental data

The summary line, highlighted, then its eight indicators: growth, prices, confidence, factories, services, housing starts, building permits, retail sales. They collapse in one click.

Hedge funds and season

Hedge fund positioning on the currency, recorded every week, then seasonality: what the currency usually does at this time of year.

What has changed

From one week to the next, a small arrow marks each box that moved up or down. On a phone, “By currency” shows one currency at a time.

IN YOUR TRADING

To pick a pair, set a bullish currency against a bearish one: the barometer shows the clearest gaps at a glance.

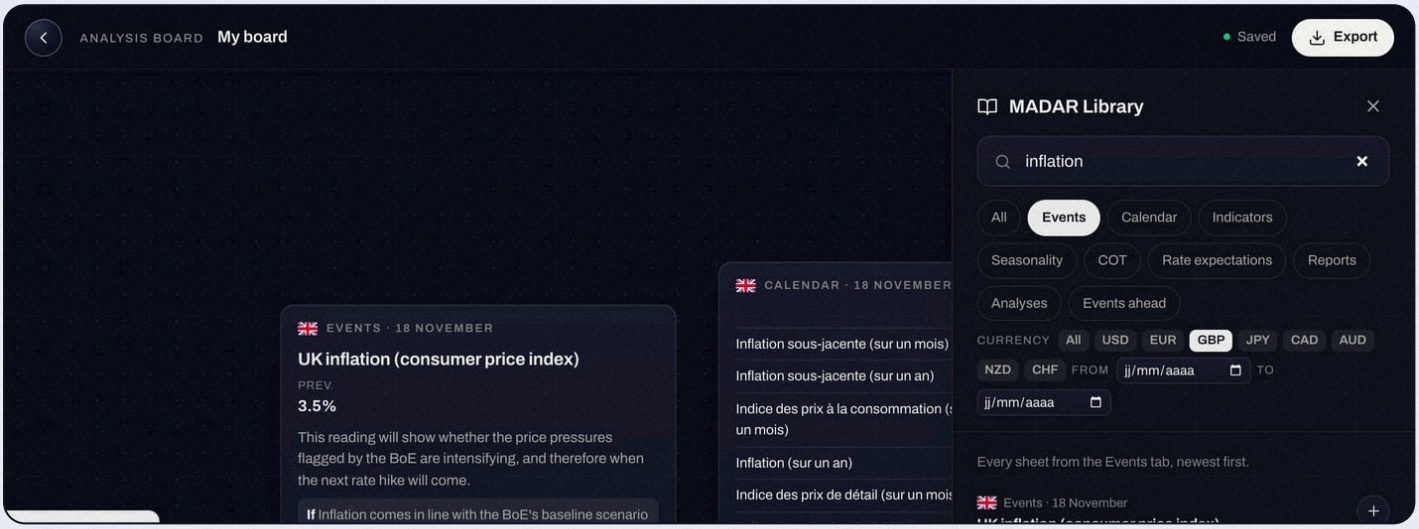

TIP

Hover over or tap a line's name: a short explanation says what it measures. A barometer describes; it does not advise.

The analysis board.

A blank page to build your analysis with everything MADAR publishes: Events sheets, calendar, indicators, seasonality, COT, bank reports. For subscribers, trial included.

Your boards

Tools › Analysis board: “New board”, as a blank page or as “For / Against” a currency. Up to 30 boards, saved as you go.

The library

“MADAR library” opens everything MADAR publishes, sorted by type: Events, Calendar, Indicators, Seasonality, COT, Rate expectations, Reports, Analyses.

Search

Type a word (“inflation gbp”, “CPI”), pick a currency and dates: every published week can be found.

Place

“+” places the piece next to the others, or drag it. It keeps its source and is frozen on the day you add it: its figures no longer move.

Build

Notes, text, “if… then” scenarios, arrows between two pieces, frames to group, pasted images (⌘V), pen.

Export, reread

“Export” makes an image of the board, with the list of its sources. On a phone, the board reads as a feed, piece by piece.

IN YOUR TRADING

One board per trade idea: the figure's sheet, the indicator behind it, seasonality, COT and your “wrong if” scenario. Reread it before you enter.

TIP

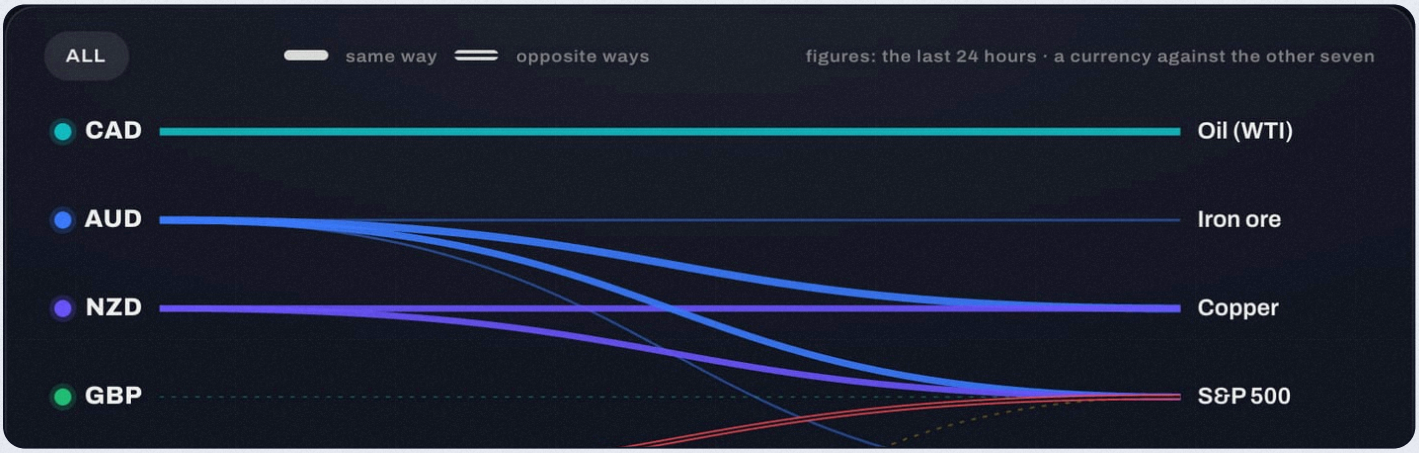

In a report opened in the library, highlight a sentence: “Add to board” places it with the bank and the date.

TOOLS · READ THE MARKET

Fair value and correlations.

Two tools to place a currency: is it expensive or cheap against its fair value? And is it following the markets it is linked to?

Fair value

Every week, the currencies against the price justified by rates, equities and commodities.

Read a row

One row per currency, the most stretched at the top: cheap on the left, expensive on the right, last week dotted. Click a row for details.

The detail

Click a currency: the model pair that measures it, its gap to fair value, and why it moved this week.

The links right now

Each thread ties a currency to a market: oil, gold, copper, equities, yields. Thick, the link is clear; thin, it is weak; dotted, it has snapped.

The last 24 hours

Who is drifting from its market? The empty circle shows what the link would lead you to expect; the solid dot, what the currency actually did.

Clear and reliable

A link counts if it is clear right now (over 26 weeks) and reliable over two years (in at least 70% of six-month periods). A few months of link do not make a rule.

IN YOUR TRADING

A currency far above its fair value has less room to rise; a link that breaks warns that a “usual” trade may not work.

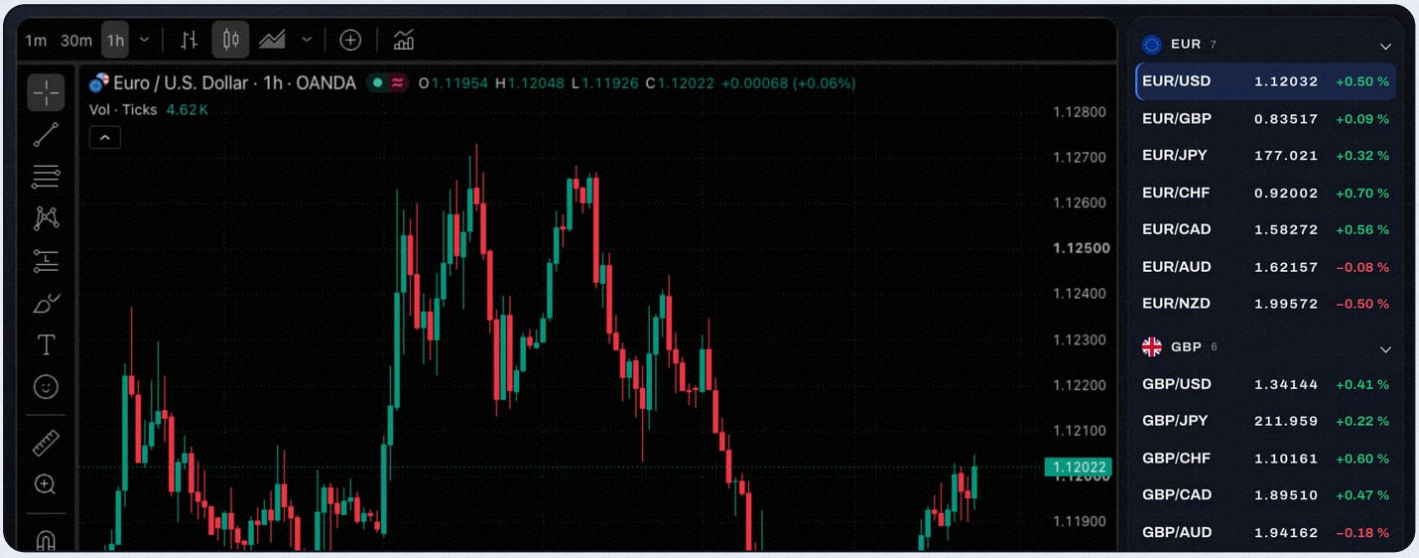

TIP

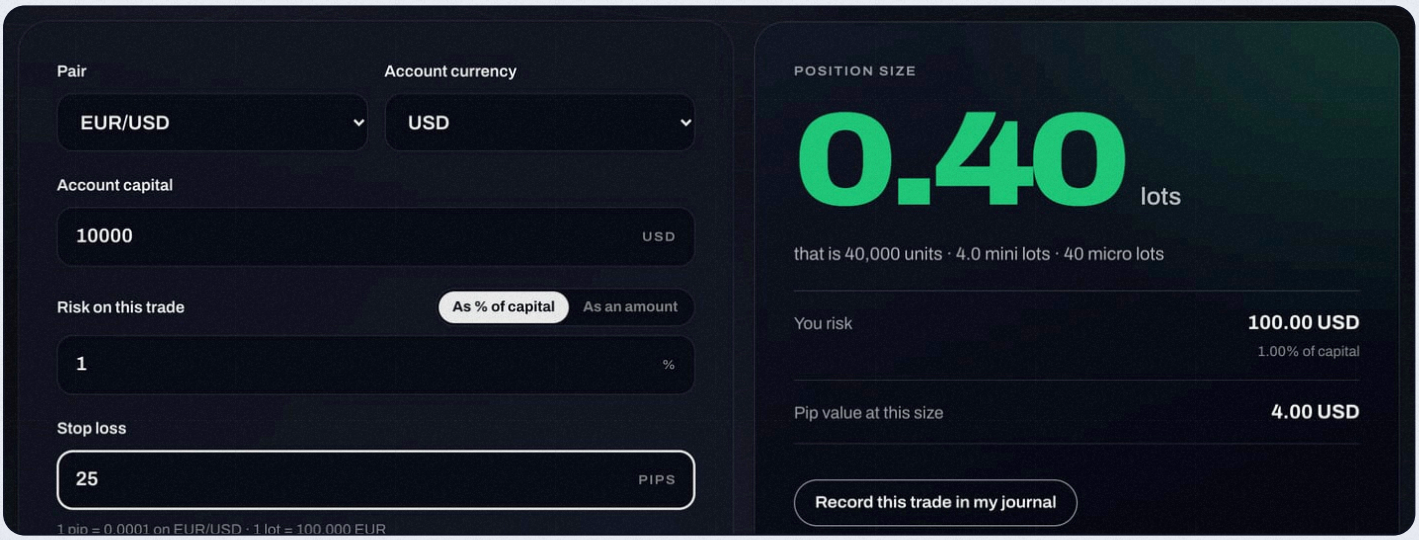

Click a link: why it works, when it breaks, and both markets side by side over 26 weeks.

TOOLS

Follow the market, size your risk.

Live prices, the right size for each trade, which side retail traders are on, and gold read through the US economy.

Live charts

The 28 pairs, gold and silver in real time, with TradingView. Pick a pair from the list on the right; draw with the chart's tools.

Position size

Enter your capital, the risk you accept (in % or as an amount) and your stop in pips: the size appears at once, in lots, mini lots and micro lots.

Before you enter

The calculator flags the pair's next major event. “Record this trade in my journal” carries over the pair, the stop, the size and the capital.

Retail positioning

For each pair, the share of retail traders buying and selling, with volumes and average prices. Sort by “Most one-sided”.

A contrarian reading

When almost everyone is on the same side, it is often the opposite move that does the most damage. Many professionals read it that way.

The gold page

In Currencies, open the gold card: the US figures, read the opposite way to the dollar. Here, green and red show the effect on gold.

IN YOUR TRADING

Never risk more than you decided: compute the size before every entry, and check which side retail traders are on.

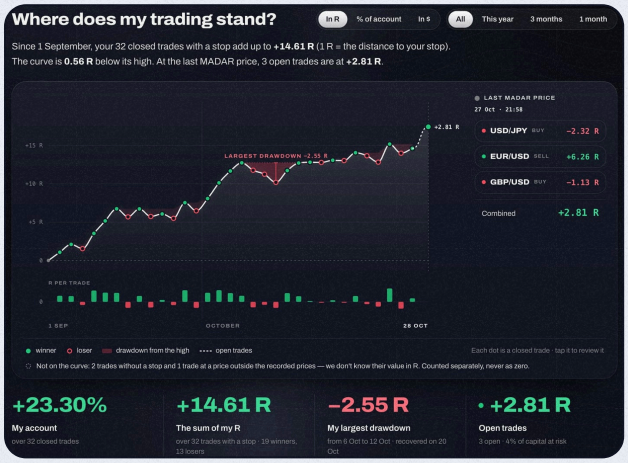

TIP

The calculation is a guide: the pip value may differ slightly at your broker.

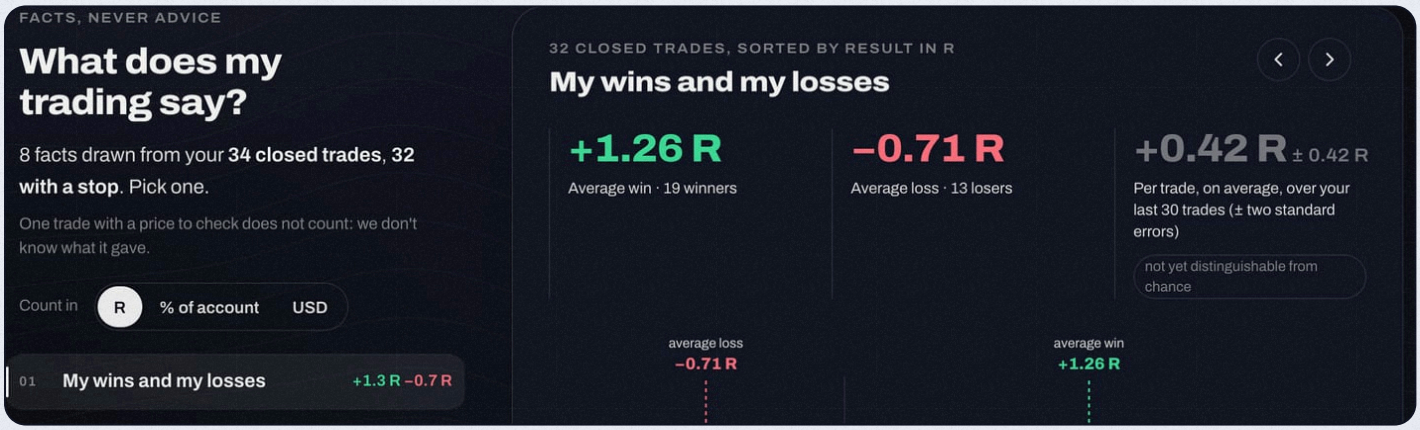

TOOLS · MANAGE YOUR TRADING

The trading journal.

Record each trade with your idea and your “wrong if”. The journal, in beta, is free with an account; the “why” behind each trade and the review of your habits come with the subscription.

Log a trade

Click “+ Log a trade”. Only the pair, the direction and the price are required; the stop, the idea and the “wrong if” make the review more accurate.

My calendar

Your closed trades, day by day or month by month, in R, in % of the account or in money. Click a day to review its trades.

My progress

Your cumulative result, trade after trade, over 1 month, 3 months, the year or since the start. Each point is a trade: click it to review it.

Review a trade

The trade replayed on its chart, with your idea and what MADAR knew when you entered: our analysis, the scenarios, the events. That is its “why”.

What my trading says

Facts drawn from your closed trades: wins and losses, your five habits, your pairs, your entry times, your streaks. Observations, never advice.

Your week in review

With a subscription, for every week in which you logged a trade, your week in review arrives between Friday and Sunday. The bell lets you know; a banner in the journal leads to it.

IN YOUR TRADING

Log every trade with its idea and its “wrong if”: after a few weeks, the journal shows what really works for you.

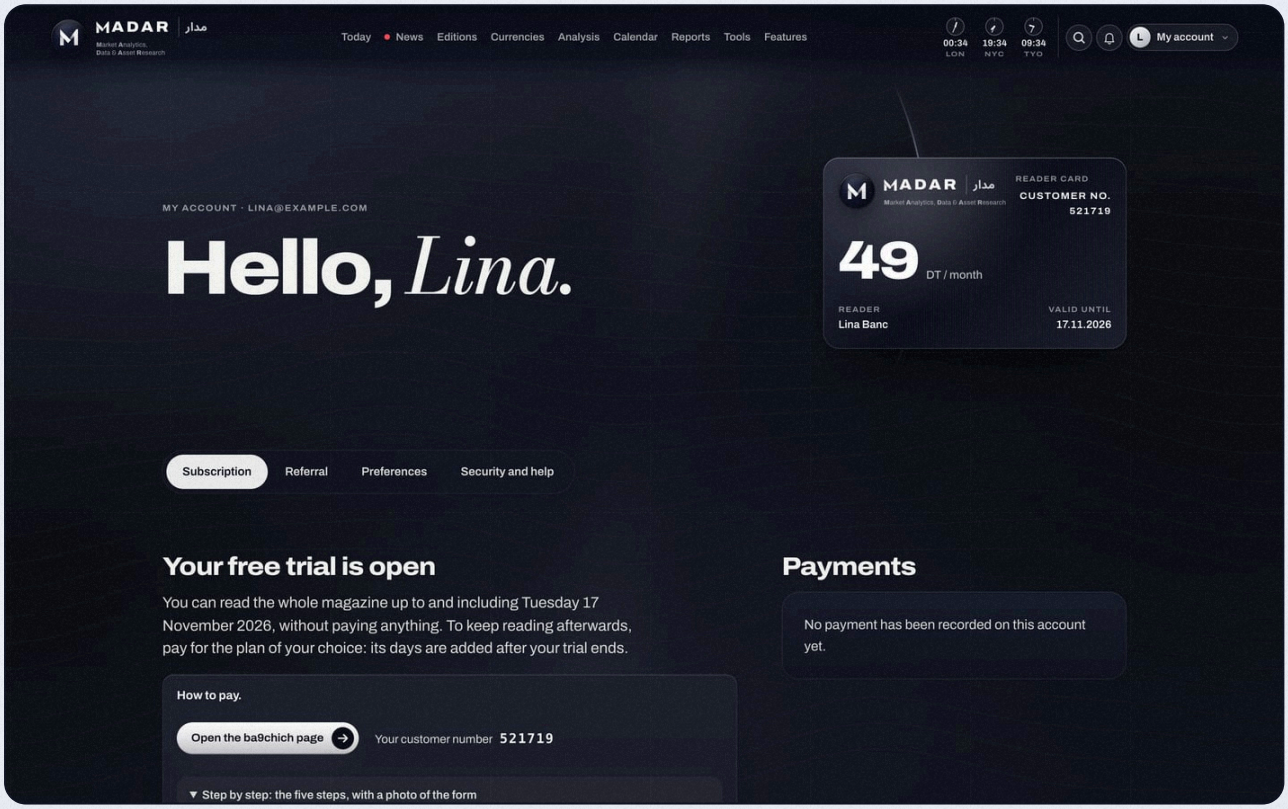

TIP

Your journal is yours: export it as CSV in “My rule and my data”, even after your subscription.

YOUR SPACE · MY ACCOUNT

My account, in four tabs.

Click “My account” at the top of the page: a menu opens, with your subscription in one line, the theme, the language, the clocks, the user guide and “Sign out”. “My profile” leads to your reader card (name, customer number, end of your access) and four tabs.

The Subscription tab

Where your subscription or trial stands, and how to pay on ba9chich: the step-by-step, your customer number, the “I've paid” button and your payments.

The Referral tab

Copy your code or the invitation link. As soon as someone you invite pays for a first subscription, you each get a free month. A promo code is entered here, before paying.

The Preferences tab

Your trading experience, the email letter, and the appearance: click “Light” or “Dark”. If you make no choice, the magazine opens in light.

The bell and alerts

The bell, for account holders, at the top of the page or in the menu, flags the daily edition, reports, the eight currencies, key figures and your journal. Alerts and sound are set in Preferences.

The Security and help tab

The PDF guide, also in French and Arabic, the guided tour, the editors' address, changing your password and logging out.

Language

In the “My account” menu, “Language” switches the magazine to French, English or Arabic; “Theme” to light or dark; “Clock” picks your clocks. Your choices are kept.

IN YOUR TRADING

Turn on the bell's alerts for your currencies: you will be told as soon as an analysis or key figure comes out.

TIP

An account is read on one device at a time: signing in elsewhere signs you out here.
